What is pain? Spiritual gurus can enlighten us on the philosophical aspect of it. Is it what we deserve for our karma or the natural culmination of healthy life?

Every other day we see suffering of people in the form of fire breakout or accident or landslide or Tsunami on the screen of the television or in the newspaper. We sympathize with the sufferer and their family. We feel the pain. But consider one day the newspaper isnâ€™t delivered, the TV cables not working. We do not watch the TV; we do not read the newspaper. Then we do not get to know what is happening in the outside world. A calamity might have taken toll of several lives, a train accident causing injuries to many. But we are not aware of that. So we do not feel the pain. Can we say, therefore, that pain is the knowledge of pain?

We face different kinds of knee pain and challenge. Emotional, financial, physical discomforts cause pain in us. As it is said every age or phase of human lives have their own set of pains and challenges. Children has to go through the learning phase, some are fast while some are slow learners. Slow learners have to cope up, work harder. The teenagers have to go through the physical changes accompanied by emotional turmoil. Young adults have the challenge of establishing themselves, prove their worth, take responsibilities and make a choice of the life partner.

At 50, the challenge takes new form. At this stage you have established yourself, taken responsibilities, done enough to secure a comfortable retired life. However, the stress and strain that you have undergone to achieve whatever you have achieved has some effects on your health. It depends on the amount of your calcium intake in the early years, the amount of physical exercises you undertake etc. However, if you have scored a half century, beware of osteoarthritis. It is one of the most widespread physical conditions among people over 50.Researches reveal one out of every five persons aged over 50 years suffer from osteoarthritis.

One major way osteoarthritis is manifested is through acute knee pain. Surgery and medication are the two knee pain remedies till now. Long term medication is not without side effects. Knee replacement is the only permanent solution.

Fortunately there have been researches on knee pain treatment and a distinguished knee surgeon working in UK has come up with a solution in the form of Keease, a battery operated medical device. Kneease works by blocking the pain signals to be carried to the brain through sensors in the form of vibrations. As we were discussing earlier, pain is nothing but the knowledge of pain. If doesnâ€™t get signals, there is no feeling of pain. This is the simple logic behind this magic device. Tested over thousands of patients and widely accepted and recommended by the medical fraternity, kneease is a device which can bring you substantial relief if used properly under medical supervision. It is also helpful for athletes and runners.
