How to Select the Right Hair Color by Doglusbrown

Article published on May 9th 2012 | Health

With the changing concept of fashion, attitudes toward hair coloring have changed too. People are encouraged to explore their individuality through hair colors. Your hair is no longer restricted to the shade it had when you were born. Instead, now it can take on all hues of the rainbow, thanks to the different hair coloring products available today.

The question is, do you really want your hair to reflect all hues of the rainbow? To answer that, you need to know your purpose for color treating your hair. Have you decided to undergo a makeover? Do you want to add more pizzazz to your plain brown, blond, black, or red hair without attracting too much attention? Or maybe, there is a special occasion coming up where you want to look your best? Answering these questions could help you choose the right color for your hair.

Hide Grays

A lot of people color their hair to hide grays. Graying hair is no longer a venerable symbol of wisdom. It screams "old". While a lot of people are able to carry off their salt-and-pepper hair with panache, many others feel self-conscious about graying hair, and therefore choose to dye it. Even if you are color-treating hair to get rid of the grays, you must remember that you don't have to stick to the hair color you were born with. Let your camouflage-gray plan become something more, as you experiment with different hair colors and play around with shades, hues, and some cool coloring techniques.

Once you have decided what you are looking for (wild party hair, subtle highlights or gray elimination) you can get down to the business of selecting the right hair color.

Color it Right

Remember that hair colors are a bit tricky, and if you have never used them before, it is a good idea to let a hair dresser handle the task. You have to decide what kind of color would go best with your skin tone. The color of your hair will play up and complement your skin tone, or it could ruin your appearance. Therefore, you have to select the color carefully.

You also need to take into account the original color of your hair and the color of your eyes. Occasionally, you would have to pay attention to the colors of your clothes.

The skin tone can be brown, bronze, or golden. Or, your skin tone can be pink or pale. Depending on these tones, you need to choose the right color. For example, dark reds look great with brown and bronze skin, but bright red rarely looks good on anybody. Similarly, very dark colors including jet black, deep browns would not look too appealing on someone with pale complexion. Not that you cannot play around with variations of these hues but to get the shade just right, you will have to let a professional handle the task.

A few tips for a better experience:

• Don't use wrong products for hair care. For example, color treated hair reacts badly to shampoos containing sulfates. Use sulfate-free shampoos such as the Keranique products. Keranique ingredients are safe for color-treated hair.

• Don't expose hair to chlorinated or salty water right after color-treating it.

â€¢ A lot of coloring products contain chemicals that could be harmful to pregnant women. Tell your hair stylist in advance if you are pregnant, ill, or suffer from allergies.

Color treated hair, with the use of right products, will look great and offer you the chance to get a complete makeover.
