Rhinoplasty (usually referred to as a "nose job) may be a top choice of patients having plastic surgery in New York City.

This can be probably because of the variety of shapes and sizes noses come in. You could have a large nose, tiny nose, hooked nose, upturned noseâ€¦ the possibilities are countless. Therefore it's no doubt a lot of people like the concept of molding their nose to a look they like the best.

Dr. Diktaban, hailed in New York as "the nose job expert," understands the process better than the almost any plastic surgeon. Did you know since there are so many details to a good rhinoplasty, many plastic surgeons consider it their least favorite procedure? Dr. Diktaban, on the other hand, considers it one of his favorites and has received spectacular feedback time and time again from patients of all ages and backgrounds.

Let's talk a bit about the procedure.

Rhinoplasty for Teens

Thanks to networks like MTV, nose related plastic surgery in Long Island is widely thought to be a "teen surgery."

It's true â€“ several teens hate the way their noses appear and would like to alter them.

At Dr. Diktaban's office, we acknowledge a few data. Mostly, the teenage nose includes a "development" stage. While that developmental stage ends, the shape of the nose continues to grow and change. Therefore, surgery before this point is not suggested, as the modifications made in surgery may be altered throughout additional growth. On top of this, you never know how your nose would turn out after the growth period, therefore if you're sad with the appearance now, it's worth it to delay it out.

So when does the progressive phase finish? Well, for girls, it ends somewhere around the ages of 13-14. For boys, it's later at around 16-17 years old. After these crucial years, you may be fairly assured the shape of your nose will stay reliable for the remainder of your life. At this time, if you'd still like plastic surgery in New York City â€“ Dr. Diktaban can perform rhinoplasty and give you the nose you've always wanted.

Rhinoplasty for Adults

Now, simply since the surgery's been hailed as a "teen surgery" doesn't mean it's inappropriate for adults. Far from it! Several adults are unhappy with the way their noses appear, so looking into a nose related surgery is definitely acceptable. In many cases, it's even better for adults to get the surgery than teens. Adults have a better and more reliable plan on how they'd like their face to look. So, any changes made throughout surgery have a better chance of continuing to look great years after the procedure is finished.

Note - this is often not to say the look of your nose would change after the surgery â€“ some patients' perceptions differ after surgery. In many cases, it occurs with those who get the surgery at a younger age.

With this type of surgery, it's crucial you get it done right the first time. That's why you must go with the doctor who's not just experienced in the procedure, however truly enjoys it as well! After all, will you really want a doctor operating on you who's just going through the motions because it's a procedure they'd wish to avoid? We didn't think so!
