Pamper Your Infant with Free Baby Stuff UK by Debra Aspinall

Article published on March 29th 2012 | Health

It's great to get free stuff. But even better if it is free stuff you really need. And when there is a baby in the house, there are usually lots of things you need!

Getting hold of free baby stuff in the UK can really help out and there are many opportunities to do this.

These sometimes start in the hospital when new mums are given goody packs and vouchers by companies keen to win their future loyalty.

Baby magazines often have vouchers or give-aways and you can sometimes find free baby stuff in UK stores.

But probably the best source of free baby stuff in the UK is on the pregnancy websites where you can join for free and get packs of samples and vouchers which can be used in top UK stores to buy baby items and equipment.

It's also worth checking out the websites of the manufacturers of baby products. They often give out samples of their products for free or with big discounts so mums can buy and try their products for less.

The giving and receiving of free baby stuff in the UK is good for everyone involved.

Mum gets the chance to try different products to see which they like the best before buying.

And for the companies involved, distributing the samples – especially via a baby website - is a great way to let new mums know what is available out there or publicise improvements or new lines of products.

If money is tight and you can't track down any free baby samples or discount vouchers, or are confused about what you should buy for your baby, make a list of what you really need to see you through those first six weeks (many baby websites will carry that information) and don't worry if you think you can't afford everything on the list. Babies don't need the best of everything or brand new stuff.

Family and friends who have children who have outgrown their baby items will probably be very happy to help out and give, or lend, you many of the things you need.

And even if you manage to get hold of discount vouchers for some of the bigger items, such as the pram and a car seat, it could be helpful to talk to other mums about the bigger items before you splash out to see what they recommend. Or check out the forums on the baby websites.
