An Overview of Memory Foam Mattresses by Julia Roger

Article published on June 13th 2012 | Home

Memory Foam mattresses were created by NASA way back in the 1970s. Developed initially for space missions, the items were not put to their intended usage because of some temperature problems in the atmosphere. Although withdrawn from NASA missions, memory foam mattresses became an instant hit among the common populace when companies like Tempur Pedic tapped into their immense potentiality.

memory foam mattresses were developed to spread pressure and get the pressure points released from the weight of a thing or an individual. Although the technology is known to carry certain fundamental flaws, memory foam mattresses have only grown in popularity over time.

Through an internet study, we have observed that the price for such foam mattresses varies widely. A simple memory foam mattress could set you back anything between $700 and $3000. However, the price tag depends on several important factors. Size is undoubtedly an important aspect here. Warranties and brand names figure next in line. While some dealers will offer you free delivery facilities, other charge a fee for it.

There have been a plethora of allegations surfacing against the memory foam. In the first place, many believe it to be the reason behind an army of allergic reactions. Secondly, memory foam mattresses are known to get heated up under body pressure. And needless to point out, no matter how comfortable the mattress is, you certainly would not cherish lying down when itâ€™s oozing tons of heat.

When it comes to buying these foam mattresses, you will hardly find any dearth of dealers. However, as is the case with any other consumer item, even the market for memory foam mattress is packed with dubious dealers. This becomes more of a concern when you are shopping online. Be sure to have thorough information about the dealer or vendor before investing in a product supplied by him. Moreover, browse through their list of mattress variations, before zeroing in on a particular product.
