Five Ways to Keep Your Home Safe by Fernando Severns

Article published on July 3rd 2012 | Home

A good head a day keeps the bad guys away. Most people have a pretty good idea how to protect their turf. And yet burglars still get away with less-than-honorable deeds every day. If you donâ€™t want to become a burglary victim, or youâ€™ve already been one and you want to prevent similar incidents in the future, you probably need to improve the way you protect your home.

Burglarize yourself. Think like a burglar. Which parts of your home are likely to be entered when youâ€™re away? Lock all usual points of entryâ€”doors, windows, and chimneysâ€”and check for other ho literal and figurative, in your houseâ€™s defenses. Seal any holes in the roof, put a screen on your windows, and fix any broken locks.

Make your locks more secure. Some burglars open spring-latch locks by sliding a card or any flat, hard object through the latch tongue. Install double or deadbolt locks and door chains. If youâ€™ve experienced losing your keys outside the house, change your locks as soon as possible; you donâ€™t want to risk someone duplicating them without your knowledge.

Use deception to your advantage. Burglars target houses that they think are unoccupied. When you leave the house, leave the lights, television and radio on; check your electrical wirings and other flammable areas in your house, lest you inadvertently cause your house to go up in flames while youâ€™re away. Sure, youâ€™ll probably pay higher for electricity bills, but if youâ€™re robbed, youâ€™l more for replacement of your lost possessions.

Install a good alarm system. There are many types of home security systems Long Island residents can use to protect their homes. You can use the conventional alarm system that sounds off as soon as thereâ€™s unauthorized entry; however, more experienced burglars can get around these. Youâ€™ll fi alarms that detect motion, light, and even body heat. Ask around for the most effective alarm systems in your area; study your home carefully for the logistics.

Miscellaneous. When you let strangers into your homeâ€”plumbers, repair men, or the encyclopedia salesmanâ€”keep an eye on them at all times. Check the Better Business Bureau (BBB) for the reputation of the company where that stranger works; be alert for any news. Never leave spare keys at home; get the best system for home security Long Island offers.

Arm yourself with common sense as well as effective home security systems Long Island residents trust to protect your home. Donâ€™t let anyone turn your sanctuary into a monument of sorrow.
