When the winter comes, many people all but forget about the outdoor areas around their homes. Leaves wilt and fall down to the ground, that prized tomato plant that was carefully tended to all throughout the summer monthâ€™s crumbles and dies, and all of our outdoor entertainment lies dormant through the short days and cold nights of the winter. For chilly month after chilly month, our backyards, porches, pools, and decks sit quietly and unused underneath a calm blanket of snow. We spend our days indoors, catching up on reading, and carefully planning our adventures once the weather turns warm again.

And once the days finally start to warm up, once they finally last a little bit longer, then we will be more than ready to enjoy the outdoors again. After the cold months of winter, those first nice days of spring feel unbelievably fantastic and satisfying. We approach each and every one of them with a fervor that was unmatched by any adventure during the winter. The first thing many of us want to do when the spring comes is start-taking advantage of our backyards again. Many people spend their winters carefully planning all of the remodeling they are going to do when spring and summer finally come.

Some people may fantasize about building a brand new deck out back. They dream of days spent with friends, hanging out around the grill, tossing back frosty lemonades and waiting as some delicious smelling steaks start to simmer. Other individuals might spend their winter dreaming of the exotic garden they will begin to plant in the fall. They dream day after day of all of the incredible vegetables and herbs that they will raise on their very own. Not only will they eat healthier all through those summer months, but they will also save a ton of money at the grocery store.

No matter how you plan on spending your summer months, one thing is almost always inevitable. If you plan on spending any time in your outdoor area, it will eventually become cluttered with all sorts of things. Your kidsâ€™ toys will end up laying all over the place, pool supplies will become scattered about, and gardening tools will lay in every spare corner of your yard. The secret to having a nice and neat outdoor area is the same as organizing your kitchen, bathroom, garage, or laundry room. The only way to maintain a tidy outdoor area is by keeping all of your outdoor supplies organized nicely and neatly. These outdoor storage solutions are fantastic for reducing clutter in your backyard, on your deck, or near your pool.

However, that isnâ€™t the only thing it is good for. The extra large deck box is fantastic for keeping all of your gardening tools stored safely out of the way. It can also be handy for storing pool supplies, whether they be noodles and float toys for the kids, or chemicals and cleaning products.

This deck box is incredibly easy to assemble, requires no tools to put together, and is made using an amazing stay dry design. It comes in a gorgeous light taupe color that will make it match with just about any color scheme.
