Getting ourself a fitted kitchen by Tom

Article published on May 15th 2012 | Home Improvement

The dimensions of every home are different and therefore the kitchen size varies as well. The cost of a kitchen fitting will depend on the kind of work that needs to be done. Other factors are if an existing kitchen is to be removed, the flooring to be changed or even the plumbing done up again. Planning the process properly and getting a good contractor to do the job will actually save you a large deal of money.

So what encompasses a kitchen fitting? Whether you are looking at installing a kitchen in a new home or revamping the one that you already have, plumbing is an essential part to be addressed. Having a contractor work on the plumbing as well as the fitting will get the job done in a single contract. The best thing to do would be to alter your plumbing according to the layout that you decide so that gadgets such as the dish washer do not need to be relocated. In the case of remodeling, try and ensure that existing connections are made use of rather than creating new ones. The cost of a kitchen fitting will include furniture as well as equipment and other necessary devices.

Hiring a professional for the job of fitting would be a good idea. Everything will be done professionally. However, there are certain elements that you could do on your own so that the costs come down a bit. In this case however, you do risk a certain amount of damage if you are unsure of what you are doing. Make it a point to go to a kitchen fitter who is certified and licensed to do this job. This is especially in the case of gas fitting. The professional will need to be registered with a gas safe agency in your area.

The cost of a fitted kitchen is dependent on the elements you include and of course the brand. You could also get yourself a discount if you buy from a retailer and hire them to do the fitting as well. Before you actually settle on one retailer, it would be best to get a quote from at least three sources. This will give you an idea of the kind of prices for the fitting of a cupboard, the installing of a sink, a work board and the materials to use etc. You will also need to make way for some storage space and this can be above or below your working space.
