Art Nouveau is an international style of art, design and architecture that rose to its enormous popularity at the beginning of the 20th century (1880-1914) and is distinguished by flowing, highly-stylized and curved designs that often integrate floral and other plant inspired patterns. It was an intensive attempt in order to create an international style that is based on beautification. It was fabricated by an outstanding and vigorous generation of artists and designers who created an everlasting art form that still stands its magic time after time. Art Nouveau was one of those admired styles that came, outshone others styles to their fame and became a fad swiftly. The immense popularity of Art Nouveau dining room suite nowadays indicates the fact that it indeed in making a comeback.

Art Nouveau was a design that did not survive for a very long time and it was in art, architecture and, furnishing design. It embarked on its journey in the last decade of the nineteenth century, and ended with the advent of World War I. It truly had a gigantic scope and zealous followers perceived it as a complete way of life, a method that broke all the links with the classical past. Art Nouveau reached a point at the Exposition Universelle of circa 1900 in Paris that demonstrated the new style in every medium with respect to painting, furniture, glassware, pottery, jewellery, metalwork, glassware, and textiles and sculpture. Nonetheless, by the start of World War I, the highly stylized nature of Art Nouveau design was discarded mainly due to how costly it was to construct. In lieu of such an expensive design, more rationalized modernization began to be favored. However, Art Nouveau influenced a variety of art and design movements that continued to discover incorporated design.

Nothing can disclaim the fact that Art Nouveau interior design as a style instigated in the end of the 19th century as a response to the fast progressing industrialization of society. There was a general fear that the contemporary infringements would prove to be detrimental for the true art forms. Art Nouveau dining room suite can be recognized by their use of light and fresh colors. It did away with Victorian style heavy painting and chairs to fill out wall space.

Art Nouveau is exemplified by the focus on natural finish in furniture. Before the Art Nouveau movement, chairs and desks were often constructed from heavy dark mahogany. On the other hand, the Art Nouveau furniture made use of oak and satin wood.
