Taking the effort out of a paint job! by Weggy Blow

The realty market in the Middle East region has been making the headlines consistently in the past decade. Companies were vying with each other to capture the hearts of prospective clients with one mega-project after another. This can be seen most prominently in Dubai, the jewel of the Middle-East. The recent corrections in the property market have led to the availability of exclusive properties at unheard of rates. This has led to a domino effect in the other sectors of the market. For example, those who have been unable to capitalize on revised property rates have begun showing renewed interest for home and office remodeling or renovation services in Dubai.

A great way to spruce up a property is by giving it a fresh coat of paint. And the people of Dubai seem to agree with this adage. In-fact, Handyman services in Dubai are experiencing a surge in inquiries for interior and exterior painting jobs in the region.

For all their similarities, no two paintjobs can be the same. Apart from the obvious differences, there are some key factors that serve to emphasize this point, especially when it comes to the inputs required in interior and exterior paint job. Taping, safety drapes, rollers, brushes, cans and scaffolding are some of the common tools of any paint job. Apart from this, interior paint jobs do bring to forth their own factors. The level of detail required in an interior paint job tends to be significantly higher than in comparison to an exterior paint job. Unless it is a brand new space, an interior job will have to factor in the various furniture and furnishings and ways to protect them. Any imperfections and deficiencies in workmanship are brought sharply into focus, due to the greater amount of time that one spends in a living space.

On the other hand, exterior paint jobs require extensive preparations for them to be durable. Due care has to be paid during the sanding and scraping procedures, if a high standard of workmanship is to be achieved. As is with all things human, mistakes do happen. Common examples include damage to carpeting, caused due to accidental spillage of paint in the interior of a home or improper application of the surface treatments for an exterior wall. Weather conditions too can be an influencing factor on the quality of a job.

The single-most factor that can have a direct bearing on job quality is the service provider you enlist for your home or office modeling project. HTS-UAE is a leading provider of Handyman services in Dubai. Their services are in constant demand by discerning citizens, who are drawn by the quality offered by this professionally managed operation.
