Wall Space Fillers That Make the Entire Room Beautiful by Eric Blair

Article published on April 5th 2012 | Home Improvement

Every wall needs space fillers. Sure, you could leave the wall blank and bare, but do so at the risk of making a room look plain and boring. From mirrors to pictures, the items you choose to fill the wall with can revitalize a room and inject it with needed color. Some trinkets tell a story about your past travels. Colorful art evokes a particular value you hold dear. Even a mirror helps add light to a room. Some people may hang up art, and others decide on more simple approaches like small wall ornaments. Whether you decide on art or wall ornaments, no wall should be without some type of item.

Art

You might see some landscape drawings at your local department store. Theyâ€™re simple, nothing fancy, but they are filled with colorful pictures that might light up a somber room. You donâ€™t have to be a huge fan of art to know the difference between an impressionist painting and a cubist drawing and find good art for a wall; you just have to know how to match the art to your living room or bedroom wall. If buying art from a department store is not appealing, you can always scout out small art galleries and buy from professional artists.

Many of these professional artists will host gallery exhibits where individuals can buy handcrafted oval shaped mirrors, sculptures, paintings and an assortment of other things people create. The costs will vary, but most of what you do find at these small exhibits are items that can easily be hung inside your living room or bedroom.

Pictures

Perhaps the most common item to hang on a wall is a picture. Pictures range from vacation photos to family portraits. A room with a few photos looks great, but fill a place with too many pictures and you have yourself one giant mess. If you decide to hang photos, try to keep the frames in a uniform color and style. Also be sure not to have too many photos in one area, and to spread the color equally around the room.

Mirrors

Mirrors are a wallâ€™s best friend. They open up a room. They add light. They even add color. From round shaped wall mirrors to small square ones, mirrors come in many different varieties, and you can find a shape and size perfect for any room. With so much variety, you can find a suitable price for any room, from as cheap as $20 to as much as $100. These items are perfect space fillers, especially for a large room with limited color and plenty of bare walls.
