Wet Basement Solutions-Take Action to Prevent Wet Basements by Joy Shiela

Article published on January 24th 2012 | Home Improvement

When you have a wet basement at home, that is just a nuisance which you donâ€™t want to deal with. It is something that should be dealt by homeowners especially when the rainy period is about to come. The homeowner may experience damp home foundations or perhaps, a much worse situation--flooding. Having a flooded basement can ultimately lead to property damage, and not only that, you may also deal with insect infestation, because insects are more drawn to moist wood.

Wet basements are caused by many factors. They can be a result of an improper surface drainage like having your own backyard sloping towards your home. It is quite easy to resolve this problem; one of the wet basement solutions for this one is to create a diversion for the flow of water. Another is leaked, damaged, or clogged gutters; the water draining will be along the sides of your house which could ultimately lead to a wet basement.

Regardless of the cause for the basement flooding, you need to be ready with enough wet basement solutions to stop flooding. For instance, clogged gutters caused the flooding, so you have to unclog it from leaves or other debris and you may do it at least once in every year. You also need to guide your downspouts to allow drainage away from the basement. If you wish, you can buy a dehumidifier as well to regulate the level of humidity in the basement. You must also see to it that the doors and windows to your basement are kept closed all all year long because once you keep them open, you are letting in a considerable amount of humidity that can result to condensation. By doing this, you might also minimize using the dehumidifier.

You can also seek professional wet basement solutions by hiring a waterproofing contractor. There are many kinds of methods to waterproof your home but it will depend on the severity of the condition of your basement.

As much as possible, it is better to prevent wet basements than actually managing them. You have to do an assessment on your property and also maintain the rain gutters frequently. If every attempt to sort things seems hopeless, then you may already need the professionals. There are many companies that deal with waterproofing your home. Just be sure to find a legit company and one that has a good reputation.
