The Power of Cause T Shirts by Erik

Article published on June 14th 2012 | Humanities

You probably have already seen a dude on the street wearing a t shirt with a writing on it saying "I love rock music" or "I like pizza" and you have probably thinking "that's interesting". Well, you might want to know that those t shirts are custom shirts that can be purchased from a few select online companies at an affordable cost and you can personalize them in any way you want. However, the full power of t shirts comes when they are used in order to raise money for charities and charitable events.

There are charitable organizations that promote certain goals and ask others show their support. They usually sell cheap customized cause t shirts that can be worn by people of all ages without any problem. The idea is that the charitable organization gets exposed to the people and more and more citizens get to know about it, what are its goals and how it tries to achieve them. This type of publicity is hugely appealing because it is eye-catchy and exciting at the same time and it can be applied on every type of product or service.

In fact, not everybody really knows the real potential of t shirts advertising. This is a relatively new type of advertising that is also called "personal branding" and it has a big effect on the reader. The cause t shirts can be customized in any way possible, using any color, design, artwork, drawing or writing that exists on this world. Additionally, the t shirts are produced for people regardless of their size and age. This makes everything extremely effective and attracts a lot of attention.

This marketing strategy is so effective because it is so simple! Earlier in the article, it was given an example and the probable effect on people. What if, for instance, lots and lots of people see this person and like the idea of a custom t shirt. Automatically, they will want such t shirts too and they will search for them everywhere, find them and buy them. Their pursuit for such t shirts is driven by the fact that they like them. They want to be unique too and walk down the street with a similar writing or image.

The exact story is for cause t shirts too. Charity organizations will release a number of t shirts that are branded with their own slogan or logo (such as "fight breast cancer" or "help people in Sumatra") and if people like the initiative, they buy those cause t shirts. Furthermore, they even create free publicity for the charity organization because those citizens will wear the t shirts in some places and they will be easily spotted. Then more and more people will know about the charity organization and its goals and if they like the idea as well, they will buy t shirts, create publicity and help the origination raise the funds required.

Such type of advertising can also be called "fashion for charity" and it is widely practiced and appreciated and you can be involved too, if you are interested.
