Every year, Costa Rica is visited by a number of tourists. Along with eco-tourism, the place is loved by all for its beautiful beaches, forests and wildlife. As compared to other parts of the world, the place has more than a quarter of land meant for protected reserves.

Throughout the Costa Rica, one will find several forest reserves and national parks. This is the reason why wildlife projects have become one of the choices for volunteers in Costa Rica. Let's know more about the volunteer programs for Costa Rica through this article.

Four major choices are as follows:

Childcare program

In the childcare program, the individuals are required to work in the orphanages, child care centers, day care centers and community child care centers. The increase in poverty and homelessness is because of the regular migration of people from poor countries nearby. And the individuals select the child care centers as well as orphanages to protect and support the homeless children.

Turtle conservation

Another program is turtle conservation program in which the individuals work to save turtles nests from poachers in the place. Costa Rica volunteering service providers come with this program to protect turtle population from getting endangered. The work generally involves working with the staff to harvest eggs, counting turtles, night patrolling and keeping eggs away from the reach of predators. From orientation to food, lodging, in-country travel assistance, in-country support and many other kinds of support is provided by the service providers.

Teaching English

Teaching English language to primary as well as middle school students is the work which volunteers do. About the program, the workers assist the local teachers; conduct own lessons and teaches the kids in the interesting methods to make the learning simple and interesting. Generally, the workers teach or work for 5 days every week for 5-6 hours daily.

Wildlife programs

Costa Rica is known for the variety of animals and plants. In total of 0.25% of the world's landmass, the place is known to have 5% of world's biodiversity. Around 800 and 200 species of birds and mammals respectively are found in this place. And volunteers in Costa Rica work for the victims of repossession, accidents and loss of habitats of animals. Along with hard working skills and enthusiasm, the individuals for the wildlife programs are required to be ecologically sensitive

Thus, with the diverse volunteer programs for Costa Rica, individuals can promote hospitality, warmth and peacefulness in this place.
