Automotive Vinyl Used As a Car Wrap by KevinPaul

Article published on April 11th 2012 | Interior Design

Automotive vinyl is an interesting topic that many consumers may like to know a bit more about. It is often something that strikes people as desirable, yet they may not know much about it to really care.

Automotive vinyl can be used on seats or as car wrapping, where vinyl is used as a design mechanism on the outside of the car. So while many people may only think of vinyl upholstery on house chairs, or marine vinyl on boats, let's take a look at automotive vinyl through the specific lens of car wrapping. This vinyl collection offers both clear vinyls as well as tinted vinyl in 4 fun colors and is available by the yard. Clear vinyl can be used for a variety of projects including upholstery and tablecloth covers, patio and greenhouse covers, golf cart and boat protectors, mattress protectors, shower curtain liners and more. Clear Vinyl fabrics ranging from 40-Gauge to 4-Gauge by the yard or by the bolt for your entire project needs. The Tinted Clear Vinyl is available in a 10 gauge weight in pink, blue, and green and yellow.

What are car wraps? They are very thin pieces of colored or decorated vinyl that are applied to the sides of cars, and they do not wreck the paint of the vehicle. These wraps are less costly than a full paint and design job, and they can be removed or changed relatively easily. Businesses are often fond of this type of automotive vinyl because they can use it to easily advertise on cars without changing the whole car or causing it to lose its value.

The lower cost of car wraps is essentially the best part of it for most people, because they won't have to hire a skilled designer and artist to paint a new design on their car. These are also completed more quickly so the consumer can enjoy their new sweet ride right away, rather than waiting for a paint job to be done, and stressing over whether the person will paint it correctly, or if they will mess it up, or if they'll have to have it redone. It's like a temporary tattoo as opposed to the real thing. This automotive vinyl will look a little less vibrant and real than the paint job, but it will be quicker, less money, less stressful, and undoable. With Marine Vinyl and Boat Upholstery your Boat will stay like new with Use marine vinyl and boat upholstery to recover your pontoon upholstery foam and marine foam.
