Doing up concept walls for your living room by Smith

Article published on December 13th 2011 | Interior Design

There's a new trend in the interior decor industry nowadays and that is of decorating concept entities. For example a concept wall in the living room, a concept cupboard for the bedroom and also a concept ceiling for the children.

This trend of designing concept entities for homes is catching up so fast that people now want at least one concept entity in the house. So what has made this transition possible? Laminates have made this transition possible and the world loves it.

In this article, we will tell you a little about how you can design a concept wall for your living room. Let's start with designing a wall which is minimalistic in look and feel but yet interesting. For this you need textured laminates that can be alternated with abstract laminates and placed on the wall as the background for the wall. If you are a fan of bright colours then our recommendation is that you go for textured laminates in orange or blue. In fact you can also try a type of textured laminates that feels like plastic and will be apt for your wall. So much so that it is so natural in look and feel that most people refer to it as plastic laminates.

So you can try plastic laminate for the concept wall and to further accessorize it you can go for electronics which is an in thing these days. These days the trend is to do up living room walls with electronic items such as home theaters and LCD televisions. If you want to go for orange abstract laminates then you can use black LCD television to accessorize the concept wall and with the use of abstract laminates you can give it the required contrast. This look is especially cool and trendy for those who believe in bare minimal style of designing.

If you fall in the category of those who want heavy decor for the concept wall then you can use family photographs for the wall and call it the concept family wall. Our recommendation is that if you are going for dark colours for the concept wall in the background then you go for portraits that are made of abstract laminates in bright textures. This will be the right contrast for your concept wall.

So here you are with two options of decorating your living room with concept walls. Then don't wait anymore just go for it!
