The bed in your bedroom is not just another piece of furniture. It is definitely more than that. Almost everyone wants to set up the bedroom in the best possible way. People take great pains in getting the walls painted, buying matching curtains for the windows and matching carpet for the floor etc. When you are done with that, you proceed to enhance the décor of the bed and for that you buy mattresses, pillows, headboard, side tables and dresser. But there is one more thing that you require to complete the look. Yes, you need bed linen to give the finishing touch.

While choosing bed linen you have got to focus on two things. Apart from the colour you also have to consider the type of fabric. It is important to choose the right fabric. This is because there are different types of fabrics and some may irritate your skin. Moreover if you live in a place where the weather remains warm for a major part of the year then you should opt for those fabrics that breathe better. Another important point is that you should like the feel of the fabric. To make things easy, you can shop around to see different types of fabrics that are available in the market. It will also help you to compare prices as well as quality.

If you prefer to have bed linen with a soft feel then you can go for the satin ones. You can also choose standard sheets made from cotton. These are quite gentle and give forth a satin like feel. Another plus point with cotton sheets is that these are very durable. However some people may experience skin irritation if they use cotton sheets. So before buying make sure to check out if this type of fabric irritates your skin or not. In this aspect Egyptian cotton can be your best bet because this fabric with its high thread count doesn't irritate the skin and incorporates all the good qualities of cotton and gives a feel of luxury bed linen.
