Splash Eco-Friendly Colours on Your Walls by Rohan Sinha

Article published on May 30th 2012 | Interior Design

Paint chemical companies have started rolling out more and more of their paint products, with lower VOC. The focus is now on coming up with eco-friendly paints which are made with non-toxic elements. Eco-friendly paints, as the name itself suggests, are the paint products which donâ€™t emit that strange smell that makes the people feel sick. No longer one needs to face the allergies and other issues related with harmful chemicals contained in paint products, as one can now opt for these eco-friendly paints.

Once you have decided on painting the interiors or exteriors, do make sure to go through all the paint options available. Itâ€™s also advised to do a fair amount of market research before you finalize on paints for your walls. Search online for paint chemical companies and you will get to know all the top paint companies in the market. This will help you buy paint products from a leading paint company. You may have to pay a little extra (when compared to the cheap options out there), but, youâ€™ll have paints that would speak volumes about you, and how you live.

If you are painting the bed room, do make sure to go online and find out which colour combinations you should go for. It could be a romantic one or a relaxing one or anything that you like. If youâ€™re not sure about which colours to paint your walls with, then you can certainly ask your friends or visit their homes to get an idea on what should you do with your interiors.

Then, one can take cues from home dÃ©cor magazines as well. Flip through pages and see what it that fascinates you the most there. Apply your favourite colours on a sample area inside your home and keep looking at it at different times of the day. If you feel like you still want to go for that particular colour combination, get your interiors decorated with those paints.

Bring in one or two antiques as well to add that extra sheen to your interiors. There is plenty of information online on what you can do to touch-up your interiors. Just do whatever you feel like. Itâ€™s your home and a perfect place to experiment.

Just be careful with colours. If eco-friendly colours are not what meet your eyes, then look for paint products with low VOC, so that you can stay away from all those possible allergies and health problems.
