Interior designers really do know what they are talking about when it comes to lighting and hanging up canvas prints and any other type of photographic type of wall decoration you may placing on your beloved walls. Light that is created around your canvas print can create different types of patterns and can influence the way that you look as a visual from different angles so it's really important to the shadows and the natural light right with certain pictures.

You can get the best out of your canvas print if you plan your image and the colours and size and were you're going to hang it, you could have two identical canvas prints and have them in two different rooms and one can look much better than the other one if the lighting reflects in the right way, firstly no matter what size canvas photo print you have you what to try and get the whole canvas in daylight as much as possible, there is another type of light you can use which is basically a light from a spotlight and have it faced at your work if that's the sort of canvas art look you're going for but if it's just a normal photo canvas print then you might be better just placing the canvas in the middle of a room where not only the natural light is caught but you will also catch the eyes of anyone that walks into the room and will end up being a big talking point.

Now one you have the position of where you're going to be hanging your canvas printing masterpiece and you have the lighting right then by this point you want to try and produce a picture that will draw out the colours that are in the very same room as the canvas print and this way it will blend in beautifully. So let's say you have a cream couch and some brown cushions which sits on a dark wood flooring then it would be a good idea to have a sepia effect canvas print, also another example would be if you have cream or white walls and have more of a contemporary looking home then you will find that a portrait canvas photo print with a white professional background will stand out and look amazing, also you will always find that not only does the white background look good in a contemporary interior design like house but tends to work in many colour schemes houses to.

Lastly a good canvas print makes good wall decor so anything from family pictures and your own pet's photos to having a funky design from a Banksy work of art can really make a difference to your home and to the way it makes you feel as canvas printing is a very unique way to experiment and show off your most favourite photos and artwork from paintings as they can also be printed to canvas to.
