Article Side
Singapore Company Registration: a Part of Starting New Business by Andrews Thomas

Article published on August 22nd 2012 | Investing

It is a known fact, all over the world, that whenever someone thinks of opening a new business in any area, he or she needs to register the company with the appropriate authority, who provides permission of doing a business in that particular area. This is applicable in case of relocation of a business in that region in concern as well. Singapore is not an exception either. Even starting a new business or relocating one to Singapore necessitates the registration of the company to the respective authority. However, Singapore company registration is a part of starting a new business there and the entire process of starting or relocating a business in that place needs many more jobs to be done.

The other different kinds of tasks, which one needs to take care of before starting his or her business in Singapore includes a number of things like managing the various supporting functions of the business in concern, checking the compliance requirements of the business and many more. Singapore company registration is the most important among all of them though. It is because unless and until you have registered your new business or rather your relocated business to the authority in concern as per the Singapore Companies Act and other jurisdictions of the place, completing the other tasks related to this would not help much. Thus, even though this is a part of it but it is always better to finish this first and with top priority. And whether a business is started by a local business person or a foreign entrepreneur, each and every business needs to be registered with the concerned authority. Most of the companies in Singapore are registered as private limited companies, which are actually private limited liability companies.

Now, this being the most crucial part of running a business in Singapore, many companies have evolved with the passage of time. Such companies help the business entrepreneurs with the diverse works, which needed to be completed before starting a business. These integrated business solutions helps one concentrate on their business start-up plan. This, apart from minimising the hassle and tension of registering their business name and gaining the required license from the concerned authority in Singapore, even aspires one towards starting as well as running a successful business. At times, the different services provided by the famous companies based in Singapore, who offers a comprehensive array of professional services, are planned and designed in a customised and tailor made format in accordance with the various business requirements of a new or relocated business.

However, apart from assisting the new businesses with their preparation for the business start-ups, these companies even help one with the post business start-up requirements. Those professional services offered by such organisations even include accounting, appointing Company Secretary for the new or relocated business in concern, compiling financial statements of the company, opening of same business day account with the selected banks, tax filing etc. Thus, starting up with the Singapore company registration, a business entrepreneur in Singapore even needs to keep in mind the completion of the above mentioned tasks.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/investing-articles/singapore-company-registration-a-part-of-starting-new-business.htm - Article Side

Andrews Thomas - About Author:
Contact One helps new businesses with Singapore company registration services. They even provide other professional services related to Human Resource, a Singapore taxation services and payroll administration.

Article Keywords:
Singapore company registration,Singapore taxation services, Singapore Business Formation,Singapore Business Setup,Singapore Business startup,registration of company in Singapore,Singapore business registration,Singapore company registration

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!