Article published on July 9th 2012 | Jewelry

The term 'jewellery' can excite any woman. Plus, Indian jewellery is so beautiful that it will only multiply the joy of any woman. Indian traditional jewellery is known for the variations and innumerable designs in jewellery. The jewellery reflects the traditions, customs and culture of India in a big way. Gold is one material that holds a significant place in Indian jewellery. Also, when it comes to marriages, jewellery has a chief prominence and is a major attraction. Indian jewellery makes the weddings of India rich and unique. The Indian gold jewellery designs have been there since generations and is a part of every Indian woman's favourite collection.

What are these different gold designs?

The several types of Indian gold jewellery designs include necklaces, armlets, bangles, fingerings, bracelets, earrings, waistbands, anklets, pendants, toe rings and nose rings. The exquisite designs and sheer brilliance of these designs will leave you spellbound and speechless. The enchanting Indian jewellery is not restricted to traditional or antique designs. Contemporary and sophisticated designs use emeralds, diamonds, pearls, ruby, yellow sapphires and white gold.

All regions and cultures of India have their own unique designs and works. Indian traditional jewellery is purely influenced by the myriad cultures. The west comes up with mirrored and stoned work, whereas the east has beaded work to boast of. In the south you will find temple based works and designs while the north has exclusive carved designs for display. Many trends are inspired from the Middle East regions and traditional jewellery completely reflects that.

When it comes to buying these enthralling designs, you will not have to hunt much. Several jewellery outlets offer numerous designs. Also, you can surf the net. Shopping online will make sense and you can log in to many websites to check out their latest designs. Many leading jewellery brands have their websites and within a few clicks you will be able to decide what you loved the most. The best part about surfing online is that you can surf many sites at once and compare the rates. Once you are done comparing rates, you will be able to zero on the brand which suits your budget the most. Also, the convenience of selecting jewellery designs from the confines of your house is a pretty comforting bet.

However, you should never forget to check a few things before you plan to buy jewellery online. The first and the most important thing is that the jewellery brand should be reputed and a genuine one. There are several online portals that pose to be genuine, however, only some are actually genuine. So, take utmost care and select jewellery. After all, you will want to surprise your loved one with a piece or gift that adds to the style statement of the wearer.
