Accredited Vs Independent Homeschool

by Frederick D

Article published on April 23rd 2012 | K-12 Education

I was looking at an accredited homeschool program the other day, looking for â€œmessagesâ€•. At first I was very impressed. Then I read the details. Letâ€™s do a little compare and contrast.

â€œEach curriculum package is individualizedâ€• - but they only use the textbook/workbook/school-at-home learning. Thatâ€™s not a very high percent of homeschoolersâ€™ chosen method.

â€œThese outstanding curriculum choices coupled with the expertise of your advisorâ€• - but the only expertise you truly need is the love for your child. True expert advice would inspire you to follow your heart and your own expertise. And remember those â€œoutstanding curriculum choicesâ€• only include the options above.

â€œOur courses range from vocational to advanced placementâ€• - so does our independent homeschool We are also not constrained by curriculum choices, and we can generate ANY class that our student needs, at any level, no matter how different or unconventional the interests our kids have.

â€œrecord-keeping options for courses on their own or through a coopâ€•. - We have options that go far beyond that. We can include ANY educational experiences on our official homeschool transcript. We can include a public school calculus or band, a coop class, a distance-learning class, delight-directed experiential learning and community college classes all on the SAME official homeschool transcript. See my book if you need a description. The Easy Truth About Homeschool Transcripts.

â€œtuition is onlyâ€¦â€• - maybe itâ€™s $195 for the first student, but the fine print will detail huge costs o or more, with no more assurances than we have from our own homeschool and our own official transcripts.

Sometimes accredited distance learning programs are the right choice for families. But look closely at the messages, weight the pros and cons, and think carefully before choosing. Remember that there is NO NEED to be frightened of homeschooling at all. There is NO REASON for anxiety about homeschooling high school. Make sure your choice is based on what is right for your own child because you know your child best, and make sure it is NOT based on fear of homeschooling. Fear is no reason for making an important choice about schooling options.

Independent Homeschools are TRULY accommodating, customized, supportive, and official. We are not flexible within some artificial restrictions, or individualized within certain program choices, or supportive as long as rules are followed. We can be official by following state law, and we recognize that accredited is not a panacea or holy grail. Our advisors are moms and dads who truly love their children and want what is best for them.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/k-12-education-articles/accredited-vs-independent-homeschool.htm - Article Side

Frederick D - About Author:
Totaltranscriptsolution.com assists homeschooling parents in transforming the years of independent schooling into a college transcripts. The site also offers some basic info on a high school transcripts.

Article Keywords:
high school transcripts, college transcripts

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!