People must were enjoying their day when the 26/11 Terrorist attack took place in Mumbai. Hundreds and hundreds of people lost their lives. God knows what the terrorists got out of it. Though, it was not the only attack that India faced ever in its history. The country faces many such attacks every year or on the alternate years, but the Government despite of all the measures fails to get hold of the full gangs. The year took away many well-known faces, who are popularly called as celebrities, and more than ten updates were regularly found after every loss of lives of such eminent people such as Shammi Kapoor and Jagjit Singh. Does anybody think of the children who lost their innocent lives in such blasts? Well, this scenario is not a very unique one for the people residing in states like Jammu & Kashmir. It is the most difficult period for the parents when their children go to schools, because they always live with fear. At any time the situations change and kill over thousands of people. Children are meant to be kept in peace, but think about those children for whom insurgency, blasts, guns, blood are usual things. When these kids grow up and take guns in their hands, we call them terrorists. At that point of time no one thinks that children learn exactly what they see their adults doing.

Though, terrorism cannot be removed from the grass root level but there are various ways that can be implemented to stop the children from walking on the path of terrorism in their future. Teachers in schools should teach their students the negative aspects of terrorism. They should tell them that it does not do any good to anybody, rather take the lives of the people and it is against human religion. Terrorism leaves a deeper impact on the children basically and makes them coward. Those children should be taught that there is nothing to be afraid of but they should never support it as well. Whereas, many children also start taking it casually and especially the male children find it exciting and wish to join one such group. Parents and teachers should take strong steps to make them understand how it destroys the lives of many people. In this way, with a little effort, we can at least try to stop our own kids from getting into terrorism.
