There are a number of top Chinese universities, in fact the number of quality universities in China has been dramatically improving over the last twenty years or so in order to meet international standards. There are now many really good universities in China, so when you study in China rest assured that you will be receiving quality education. If you are looking to study in China, it is best to take on a study abroad program which incorporates excellent education with comfortable accommodation, fun excursions and proper insurances. Here is our advice on the four best cities when you study in China.

Beijing is the first port of call for the best universities in China, and it is renowned for having a whole selection of great institutions to choose from. The two most famous are Peking University and Tsinghua University, both of which are highly regarded worldwide. However, there are plenty of other options, including schools that teach aeronautics, agriculture, business and sports. There is also the Beijing Language and Culture University (BLCU), which is a great choice for those looking to study in China. Not only is it one of the top Chinese universities for language study, but it is specifically catered to foreign teaching and there are many foreign students there. This makes it a great place to meet people from all over the world whilst also gaining valuable language knowledge and experience.

Another great location for top Chinese universities is Shanghai. Both Shanghai Jiaotong University and Fudan University are well-regarded and have plenty of foreign students. They are also some of the largest universities in the country, boasting campuses with over 20 or 30 thousand students on each. This means there is a real university campus vibe as not only does one mingle with Chinese, but also other study in China students who come from all over the world.

Of course, Hong Kong is another top location for universities in the region, with Hong Kong University being particularly well-renowned and offering plenty of courses in both Chinese and English, thereby allowing you to take a whole variety of different subjects and courses whilst studying there. Add to this the beautiful surroundings and multicultural environment that is unique in China and you will find Hong Kong a great place to study in China, no matter what subjects you choose.

If you want to go to a city outside of these fairly obvious choices, then Kunming is certainly an area you should consider. There are plenty of great universities in the smaller Chinese cities, but this city stands out for its good academic record, laid-back lifestyle and exciting cultural elements. For a unique cultural and academic experience, there is more to top Chinese universities than simply the best place to study in China.

All of these choices are only the beginning when it comes to the best universities in China. However, if you are looking to study in China then these are the first places you should consider when choosing a program. If you do this then you will surely end up at one of the top Chinese universities, and one that will suit your needs.
