An Experienced Mesothelioma Attorney Can Help Achieve a More Successful Litigation Process by Sutherland

Article published on January 12th 2012 | Law

Malignant mesothelioma is a fatal cancer that attacks the protective lining of the bodyâ€™s inner organs. Development of this cancer is associated with inhaling asbestos fibers, which were widely used in past years commercially for this materialâ€™s properties of sound absorption; as well as resistance to fire, heat, electric and chemical damage. Asbestos fibers were even woven into fabric and mixed with cement to produce fiber cement with exceptional strength.

It was clear by the 1920s that exposure to asbestos could cause cancer and since then there have been many appeals to ban its mining and use. However, a number of businesses continued to use this hazardous material. Though asbestos was one of the first pollutants to be regulated in the United States, a total ban is still not in place. According to a 2004 report, there were 1.3 million workers in the United States still at risk of asbestos exposure in the construction industry, especially those involved in building maintenance and equipment repair. A mesothelioma attorney can assist sufferers of this deadly cancer due to the greed of manufacturers hoping to save a few dollars.

A mesothelioma attorney ensures that the litigation process is handled properly. One of the most complex issues related to mesothelioma litigation is the latency of diseases related to asbestos. This disease can remain hidden for decades after a personâ€™s initial exposure to asbestos. Even a small amount of exposure can potentially lead to the future development of asbestos related diseases.

Each case requires a different litigation process, which necessitates the help of an experienced attorney to bring the compensation lawsuit to its logical conclusion. Most states in the United States have statutory limitations that bar actions taken after a specified lapse of time after the initial exposure. An experienced attorney who has handled such cases before ensures that the litigation process is initiated within the statutory limitations and filed in the court that has the jurisdiction to hear the case. The attorney will also know from experience how to identify defendants, the people responsible for the victimâ€™s exposure to asbestos and consequent suffering.
