Article published on January 20th 2012 | Law

Mesothelioma is a debilitating illness that can leave many victims and their families in a difficult situation. More often than not, these victims find themselves faced with a dim prognosis, mounting treatment expenses, and a questionable future. If you or a member of your family has developed mesothelioma, trying to figure out which law firm to approach might only confuse you more. Read on to learn about the important qualities present in a mesothelioma attorney that may help you the most.

The first and foremost thing you should consider is the mesothelioma attorney's experience. It is crucial that the attorney and firm has already handled many mesothelioma cases. After all, you do not want an attorney who is unsure of what he is doing. You can learn about their expertise in handling such cases by going over their case history and case results. The firm should have a track record in this field.

Baron and Budd, P.C. is one experienced firm. With over thirty years of experience successfully representing mesothelioma victims and their families, this law firm is a leader in asbestos litigation. They have won millions of dollars in compensation for their clients. This law firm has won one of the largest mesothelioma verdict in the state of Texas and successfully handled one of the first asbestos lawsuits ever filed.

Another factor to consider is the firm's resources. Do they have a sufficient number of lawyers and researchers to see through the case from start to finish? Can they practice in different states? You definitely do not want a firm that will pass your case to another attorney when the case reaches another stage.

With Baron and Budd, you can be assured of full access to their database, compiled from mesothelioma cases handled over the years. They have over 50 attorneys committed to "protecting what's right." Over 200 staff can handle the research needed for your particular case. This law firm can handle your litigation from start to finish.

Affordability is also a key aspect. Can you afford any up-front fees that may be required for legal services? Bear in mind that there may be escalating medical fees to consider. Furthermore, litigation generally requires additional expenses as it progresses. Your efforts may prove futile if you have to stop midway due to financial constraints. With Baron and Budd, like other plaintiffs' firms, there are no out-of-pocket expenses on the part of the client. They work on a contingency fee basis.
