How to Have Your DUI Charges Lessened by an Attorney by Kellee Parker

Article published on March 27th 2012 | Law

If you have been arrested and charged with driving under the influence, you probably know that you are about to face some very tough consequences. Aside from having the crime on your record for a very long time, you will have to pay high fees, have your driverâ€™s license taken away, and be forced to take substance abuse classes. Depending on the nature of your arrest, and if you are a repeat offender, you may even face jail time. The only way that you will be able to get some of these charges lessened or lowered is hiring an experienced DUI attorney.

There are a number of severe consequences you will be facing when you have been charged with a DUI. Prior to your court date, it will be critical that you meet with an experienced DUI attorney. Your attorney may be able to uncover things that will have a major impact on your case. Oftentimes, the arresting officer will make mistakes when it comes to your sobriety field test. This is something that only your attorney will know to look for. It is for these reasons you want to hire someone who specializes in drunk driving cases or is extremely experienced handling cases in this field.

Just a few of the charges that your attorney can help you with involve your driverâ€™s license and fines. When you are arrested for a DUI, your driverâ€™s license will automatically be filed for suspension. Your hired attorney will know that you need to file a hearing with the DMV 10 days after your arrest. This is the only way that you might be able to get some of your privileges back. Your attorney will fight for you to prove that not being able to drive to and from school or work will cause you severe hardship. Fees and fines can also be lessened. The fines for a DUI are extremely high. Most people have a difficult time paying them. An experienced attorney may be able to work out extra community service by proving that you are financially unable to keep up with your fines.

You can quickly see how critical it is to find an experienced lawyer. Without one, you will have to face some pretty tough consequences on your own. To find someone who will fight for you, get some recommendations or do some research online. Itâ€™s easy to find a O.C. DUI attorney or a SoCal DUI attorney right on the internet.
