Disability entails that a person is not capable to work further anymore. Therefore such individuals are entitled for social security benefits. To apply for social security disability benefits is extremely hard task because its procedure is quite long & takes much time to be completed. It might takes months or years to complete the whole process, so for this process Social security eligibility is an important factor which needs to be fulfilled.

It is beneficial to apply for the social security disability whenever you become disabled

Here are few points which have to be fulfilled for the social security eligibility benefits:-

If a person has worked for a minimum of 5 years out of earlier 10 years of his work under Social Security employment.

An applicant ought to be amply insured at the origin of disability.

If the disabled person is under or bellow the age of 31, then he should have worked for more than the six months.

To take advantage of the social security disability, an individual must be handicapped enough to not be able work in any paying paid job for at least successive twelve months.

In Social Security Administration, Disable person could be mental or physical or both.

An applicant is not eligible if he is able to do job somewhere else in that condition.

It just contains whether a person is emotionally and physically competent of doing the work which are commonly accessible in each day.

Moreover, Eligibility criteria does not comprises whether a person can do his job again which he has lost because of the disability.

An applicant has to get a doctorâ€™s statement about his/her condition, which could prove that he/she is disabled. So that this will be proven that that person is disabled and is not faking up.

With the assistance of testing object, at times it is extremely hard to prove disabling conditions of a person. As a result, in those cases it relies on a disabled personâ€™s representative or legal assist to demonstrate doctorâ€™s health reports correctly & to convince the government that a person is eligible for social security benefits.
