Article published on May 23rd 2012 | Law

Mesothelioma is a rare type of cancer that is caused due to asbestos exposure that results in inhaled fibers becoming embedded into the mesothelium of internal organs. It often takes twenty to sixty years to develop into malignancy.

For many years, the disease was considered a mystery and no substantial treatment procedures were available. Over recent decades, however, scientists, physicians and researchers have found innovations in mesothelioma treatments.

When diagnosed early, mesothelioma patients have larger chances of survival. Unfortunately this is often not the case since treatment is delayed due difficulties diagnosing this disease, due to its ability to lie dormant for decades. To better understand mesothelioma, it is important to know some symptoms of mesothelioma.

Mesothelioma symptoms

Mesothelioma symptoms mimic symptoms of other diseases. This often prevents it from being detected in its early stages. Mesothelioma symptoms are divided into four stages with the fourth stage being the most advanced.

Across these stages, common mesothelioma symptoms include violent coughing, chest congestion, weight loss, loss of appetite, blood in the patient's stool, fatigue, and more. Such symptoms worsen as the mesothelioma stage progresses.
