Christmas carols resound out on the streets. It is distinctly that time of the year that you love the most. Everybody young or old waits for Christmas to come. Everything about it is wonderful-- the winter, the snow, the warm fireplace with little stockings hung over it along with a number of candy canes. But wait, something seems to be missing in the room. What is that? The Christmas tree is not there yet? Why not? You are putting it off until the last? It may not be a great idea to do that for all the good and pretty ones will have gone by then. Is it a monetary issue. Is Christmas not going to as fun for you as for all others because you do not have the fiscal backing for it.
