Chinese Flying Lanterns Bring You Big Surprise by Catherine

Article published on July 30th 2012 | Marketing

Sky lanterns are now so readily available to purchase on the internet. But you must be careful when choosing a supplier or online retailer. This is because many companies now selling these lanterns are using suppliers from China who produce very low quality sky lanterns which are often very dangerous. The Chinese lanterns made in China are mass produced often using materials such as fiberglass or asbestos. We have done our research and found that the best quality lanterns are from Thailand, many of which are handmade from environmentally friendly materials.

Just as in ancient China, children today will also be captivated by these flying lanterns. They make a perfect addition to any child's party. Children will delight in the illuminated and flying candle lanterns and be captivated by the stories that go along with these lanterns. The idea of something that can bring us luck or take away our problems is appealing to young and old alike. No matter what you believe, you will have a hard time not being impressed by the sight of lighted candles flying into the night sky. Chinese lanterns have a long, mythological and spiritual tradition. Whether you believe in the stories associated with these lanterns or not, the idea that our dreams can be sent into the sky as symbol of luck or as a way to take away our problems is an idea that easily captures our imagination and sense of wonder.

The body of a sky lantern collects hot air which is created by the heat from the wax fuel cell which it lit prior to the sky lantern launch. Then after approximately 1-2 minutes the body has enough hot air for the sky lantern to rise and float upwards into the sky. The wax fuel cell then continues to fill the lantern with this hot air which is why the lantern does not fall to the ground. It will however slowly float back down after the fuel cell has completely burnt out. This is when the sky lanterns which are also known as Chinese lanterns slowly parachute back down to earth. This causes no danger to the environment or surroundings as the lanterns are not ablaze at this time. The wick is then safe to touch because at this time it is cool.

Sky Lanterns have become a frequent sight in recent years. They are normally seen and are popular in ceremonies and anniversaries. There are not that many individuals who would claim they are not mesmerized or enchanted by the sight of sky lanterns or flying lanterns as they are also known.
