Article published on December 3rd 2011 | Marketing

When youâ€™re charged with a DUI, you will almost always be offered a plea bargain deal or the choice to go to trial. Plea bargains are so common that some State attorneys actually hope that certain DUI defense attorneys take a case, because those DUI lawyers are so well-known for plea bargaining cases. But, when there is another option, why are plea bargains so popular? And more importantly than that, is the fact that theyâ€™re so popular a good indication that one will be right for you?

If youâ€™re offered a plea bargain from the Stateâ€™s attorney, a DUI lawyer whoâ€™s only out for that f might encourage you to take it. This is because plea bargains take little to almost no time or effort on the part of the DUI lawyer, but theyâ€™ll still take as much of your money. They may tell you that they can get the charge lessened or, if youâ€™re facing multiple charges that they can get some of those charges dropped.

In exchange, youâ€™ll have to plead guilty to the charges against you and pay a fine and quite possibly, spend some time in jail. These are all of the things that youâ€™re trying to avoid, but thereâ€™s more to it than just that.

Truthfully, you could speak to the Stateâ€™s attorney yourself, without ever hiring a DUI lawyer, and be offered the same plea bargain. Sometimes a plea bargain really might be in your best interest, but it should usually only be used as a last result, and you should never feel pressured into accepting one.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/marketing-articles/how-dui-attorneys-can-advice-you-about-plea-bargaining.htm - Article Side

Jacob Varali - About Author:
This article was created on behalf of The Law Office of Steven Pisani, a DUI attorneys in Denver.
The Law Offices of Steven J. Pisani provides affordable full-service legal assistance with criminal defense representation, DUI cases, traffic tickets, juvenile delinquency cases and sealing criminal records.

Article Keywords:
DUI attorneys in Denver

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!