What is Tibetan beads? In fact, Tibetan is a elegant name of alloy---copper-nickel alloy or so-called pewter. Traditional Tibetan beads contain thirty percent of silver and seventy percent of copper. As the silver content is too low, so almost all the Tibetan beads on market are replaced by copper-nickel alloy completely now. Tibetan style beads are very popular for the moment, and Pandora style Tibetan silver beads and jewelry charms are the most popular.

To some extent, Tibetan beads also convey a traditional cultural tint of Tibet. That is why the Tibetan jewelries look more mysterious and exotic. A quick look around the market, you will find plentiful Tibetan beads, Tibetan charms, Tibetan pendants, Tibetan toggles & Tars, Tibetan Dzi beads and some others in different colors, designs and sizes. They can be mixed and matched with other materials to make necklaces, bracelets, and earrings. There are also many Tibetan bookmarks which are very popular nowadays.

Tibetan Beads looks more mysterious and exotic. If you like exotic style, Tibetan jewelry will be your best choice. When you search fashion jewelry pieces around the market, you will find that there are so many beautiful Dzi beads, Tibetan charms, Tibetan pendants, pewter jewelry and so on. All of them have different colors, shapes and sizes. You can easily find out your desired Tibetan beads to make your own Tibetan jewelry pieces. If you like those beads very much, you must care them very much. As there are some silver in Tibetan beads, you need to how to clean and care for them. Wipe the beads or jewelry pieces with a piece of wet cotton cloth. Do not clean them with silver police or any other kind of chemical, because many Tibetan jewelry pieces are created with soft stones such as turquoise and coral that may become discolored. You can polish the gemstones with baby oil, and then wipe off the extra oil with a tissue or soft cotton cloth.

Amongst so many jewelry beads, Tibetan beads is one of the most traditional, mysterious and exotic beads. Tibetan beads is an elegant name of alloy--copper-nickel alloy or so-called pewter.
