Article published on July 20th 2012 | Marriage

"Till death do us part" so says the famous wedding vow. Couples enter wedded life with the hope of committing towards his or her partner for a lifetime. If this aim is not accomplished or if either of the spouses dies, the longing to be a couple is so entrenched that most of them will marry again.

The definition of marriage has been set in two different ways: one is to settle the marriage between legal agreements done in a paper between two people (prior to getting married) whose desire is to live forever in a relationship as husband and wife and bring up a family, and the other as a holy sacred matrimonial ritual. It is usually recognised as "pre-nup" in colloquial language and it comprises of dissection of property and alimony in the place where the couple will get divorced. A prenuptial agreement is just a way of making things easier. So before you plan to sign a prenuptial agreement check out the guidelines you should know:

There are several reasons behind why an individual may wish to file for a prenuptial agreement. Some of the reasons an individual can file a prenuptial agreement are:

ïƒ˜ If your worth is considerably higher than that of your would be partner's, a prenuptial agreement can help you to make sure that your spouse is getting married to you for who you are without considering your financial matters.

ïƒ˜ Another reason behind filing prenuptial agreement is if your spouse has a huge amount of debt, if your nuptials were to end in divorce, you could be answerable for the large sum of debt of your ex-spouse's, or if they file for insolvency, creditors can therefore still target you to get hold of their payments.

ïƒ˜ One more very important ground to file a case is if you are remarrying. If you are married once or twice in the past, your financial position and concerns are a very different now than they were in your previous marriage(s).

Prenuptial agreements are extensive documents, and particularly if this is your very first marriage there may be several conditions you would like covered in the agreement but you do not know the appropriate way to make sure that it expansively cover all the issues. If for all this you require a proficient and qualified lawyer you can get in touch with Honey Law.

Honey Law will assess the case and give you a better view of the case. A solicitor will guide you through the case and an assistant solicitor will assist on their end. Honey Law Solicitors Huddersfield or lawyers Huddersfield are the best individuals who can guide you through planning and signing of a prenuptial agreement.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/marriage-articles/understanding-prenuptial-agreements-why-you-need-a-lawyer.htm - Article Side

Honley Law - About Author:
The Honey Law Practice Solicitors can help you with the initial assessments of your case and deal with it carefully so that it can be resolved. They are a great choice when it comes to a solicitors Huddersfield or a lawyers Huddersfield.

Article Keywords:
solicitors huddersfield, lawyers huddersfield

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!