How to Choose the Right Case for Your iPhone or iPad by K.Singh

Article published on February 2nd 2012 | Mobile Phones

You are spoilt for choices when it comes to Apple accessories. If you are an Apple user and own a device such as iPhone or iPad, a good case is essential. It is one of the first accessories users buy and one of the most bought accessories across the world. It not only protects your device but is also used as a fashion accessory by many. It is little surprise that even the top designer brands make cases for iPhone and iPad. However, the ever expanding range can also make it difficult for you to choose a case for your precious device.

Here are the main things to look for when choosing a case for your iPhone or iPad. It will help you to make the right purchase.

Pricing

Price continues to play a major role in almost all purchasing decision. Under the current volatile economic conditions, it may be a concern for many. The price range varies significantly and there is a wide choice within each price range. On the higher end of the market, designer cases can cost in hundreds or even thousands. However majority of the case are much more competitively priced.

Durability & Strength

Although price and visual appeal are important, it is absolutely essential for the case to fulfil its primary purpose, which is to protect your device. It is for this reason that durability should be a priority in your choice. Some case indeed look good but may not offer the level of protection you expect. What the case is made from can have an impact on its strength.

Versatility

Versatility is important in every product. It has been the main focus for accessory manufacturers in recent months. The last few months have witnessed a range of new iPad cases that are innovative and have been designed to be more versatile. Simple things like inclusion of an extra protective lining on the inside or extra pockets to carry your bank cards or other documents can improve the versatility of the case and make it more appealing to users.

Visual Appeal

Of all the factors, the look and feel is probably one of the most decisive factors. This is also one area where there is plenty of choice. New designs are launched almost every day. It is hence little surprise that iPad cases were featured extensively in this years CES, one of the leading tech fairs held in the USA. More there is more to iPad accessories than its use. They have also become a fashion accessory for many users. Even the most reputed designers including Gucci and Chanel make iPad cases.

Warranty & Support

Like any product, you want your iPhone and iPad case to be protected by basic warrantees or product guarantees. This depends largely on where you purchase your case. Most decent stores or websites will offer basic manufacturers warrantee on all their products to take of manufacturer defects. Some also offer money back guarantee if you are not satisfied with the product. Items may sometimes get lost in transit and this should ideally be covered to save you for unforeseen risks.

Ergonomics

It is also important to make sure the case is ergonomically designed and is easy to use. A good case will provide easy access to all device features and controls. It should fasten with ease to ensure your device is kept secure.
