RIM in its Major Reorganization of the Company Result in 2000 Jobs Under Threat by Andy Thomson

Article published on May 31st 2012 | Mobile Phones

According to the new Research in Motion is set to restructure the company under which there are chances of 2000 jobs under threat. Such cutting of the jobs would badly affect the world wide legal, marketing, sales, operations, and human resources divisions. This announcement by the RIM would-be expected by 1 June means a day before when the manufacturers shows there first quarter performance and some people are saying may more early than that.

Last week Patrick Spence quit the company and was the manufacturer's head of global sales and now he is ready to work in an audio company Sonos. RIM CEO Thorsten Heins when announced the full year results on March also stated that a calculated renovation of the business moreover also stated that the company in its fourth quarter has lost $125m.

At this present time period RIM is struggling a lot in this technical industry and is quite possible of cutting 6000 jobs. In the news it is written just 2000 jobs but the actual figures are actually high world wide. May be there are few chances that the company may think any other way for filling the gaps. Nobody is sure that RIM is moving into which direction they are not getting that whether the company has raised this step for the better future or anything else. Brian Bidulka who was recently appointed as chief financial officer has told that during the last year income in reorganizing the operations and has saved $1 billion in a year so it might be possible that the rumors that are spreading are relatively true.

RIM world wide staff is around 16,500 and deducting 6000 jobs would be cutting of the gigantic mass or approximately about 36% of the workforce. It's quite possible that the junior staff members would be target to leave the company and may be Thursday would be their last day as normally all the meetings usually take place at that day. In the starting of the month RIM is setting out a pack of marketing guff and hyperbole about how to take care of the business and such stuff would influence everyone. Moreover Sony is also taking steps in cutting down the jobs.
