Spice M-5180 is among the best buys for casual users. It is an entry-level phone from Spice, built to attract young Indian mobile users. The phone looks tempting at its affordable prices. Although mobile market in India is crowded with variety of mobile phone designed and built for different classes of users. This mobile phone attracts young users as it is loaded with large number of useful and attractive features.

This Spice mobile is simple yet elegant with its black finish. Having a lightweight body at just 90 grams and curved edges, this phone is easy to hold. It has a 4.5 cm display with 128*168 resolution. Although it has alphanumeric keypad and navigation at back, it does not have any shortcut on its side. On its back, you will find an excellent VGA camera along with speakers. This camera at its back has the 0.3 megapixel resolution, digital zoom and exposure control capabilities. It also features video recording and can work as a webcam.

Since this phone is designed for young mobile users, it also features functionalities that enable the users to connect to the internet. It features the GPRS and WAP browser. However, its web interface is very basic and thus cannot be used for advanced functioning. It is equipped with 1800 mAh standard Li-ion battery that offers up to 500 hours in standby, and up to 9 hours of call time. Although it comes with limited internal memory, it has up to 8GB of external memory to support.

When it comes to multimedia features, this phone is not a poor brother since it is loaded with several multimedia features such as FM Radio, a VGA camera and audio player, video player and video recorder. It has features for FM connectivity and storage of FM channels. While searching signals, FM reception works smoothly. However, audio quality of the phone is not very appreciative as it is just ordinary. With headphones, it can be better. Moreover, its music player is basic and ordinary without much fanfare. Regarding connectivity, it features WAP, Bluetooth and USAB for sharing data. It offers facility to store up to 500 phonebook entries.
