

Article Side

Things to consider before you purchase a home phone by Heather Protz

Article published on March 30th 2012 | Mobile Phones

You see, you do need a phone connection at home even today. Regardless of the fact that every individual in your family including your dog own a cell phone, there are some essential points that I'd like to share with you on the advantages of a home phone service. With a home phone connection, there's never a problem of the battery dying down. Think about it, with a home phone connection, you can always catch your teen in action and they can't shift the blame on crappy mobile communication devices anymore. A home phone connection is always accessible (rain or storm), has no problems with the coverage and has very few communication interferences.

So yeah, you do need a home phone connection. You ready to buy one? Let me give you some random tips that you need to consider before buying a home phone connection. As I do that, I'll also cover the recent advancements and must have features when buying a home phone.

First of all, decide the type of phone device that you want. Do you want a cordless or a corded? Let me tell you that most cordless phones don't work when the power goes off. But consider other models of cordless phones that work on reserved power. But you have to go through the troubles of remembering to keep the phone on charge. You have corded phones with lengthy, lengthy wires with which you can drag the phone to two or three rooms in the vicinity. But many don't prefer that because, well it just looks clumsy and someone unsuspecting may trip and fall. Choose wisely.

The next thing that you need to choose is- do you want a digital phone or an analog phone? Digital phone connections can compress the data and save space while as analog phones have lesser base-widths. Moreover, digital phones have a safer network and therefore lesser chances of phone phishing. The voice clarity is pretty much amazing with a digital phone. Understand that digital phone services can also be rendered over the Internet. Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP) phones offer crystal clear voice clarity, cheaper call rates and long distance calling features. Don't forget to check out on ways and means to save money so that you don't have to stretch your monthly budget.

When choosing a home phone service it's severely important to compare and contrast the various service providers in your area. Consider the following questions when doing so. What are the free features you get with that particular service provider? Does the home phone service provider offer unlimited nationwide and local calling by the minute? What are the calling features does the service provider offer? Here are some of the features that home phone service providers like Centurylink phone offer in the US: caller ID, call waiting, voicemail, anonymous call rejection, three-way calling etc.

Before buying a home phone, check out the features that the phone has. At present, there are land line phone devices that come with really cool features like LCD, conversation recording, speaker phone etc. Before deciding on the model, ask for the different features that are available on various telephone models, decide on the features that you really need and then buy the device.

Lastly, take some time out to consider the bundled services. It is now possible to combo up your Internet, home phone and cable TV services under one bill. You can save a whole wad of cash on your home entertainment and communication bills. A majority of telecommunication companies in the US are excessively promoting their bundled services. Best of all, one company, three services and low monthly prices!

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/mobile-phones-articles/things-to-consider-before-you-purchase-a-home-phone.htm> - Article Side

Heather Protz - About Author:

Heather is a cheery, enthusiastic college student. Being ambitious, she decided to run a part-time business in campus. As a freelancer she likes to share her thoughts on business management and she actively participates in local leadership clubs. She saves a lot of money by sourcing out some great offers like the one offered on a Centurylink phone

Article Keywords:
Centurylink phone

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!