Google has planned to snap up Quick office for a Company that construct iphone, ipad, Symbian and Android apps and let their consumers unfasten and amend the Microsoft documents on their smart gadgets and tablets. Google stated that they are taking steps on squeezing the company file format into its personal document tools. Google also stated in a post on the search giant's official blog that today every single person or consumer, businessman and schools all uses Google apps for getting their work done from anywhere, on any gadget or with anyone.

If they have to perform any kind of searches they simply Google it and get their answers back. Quick office enables seamless interoperability and has a recognized track record with trendy file formats. Moreover would be working on using the dominant technology to our Apps invention suite Quick office's™s iOS apps have made it promising to produce and amend Microsoft office document, presentation files and the spreadsheets. So now you may perform some authentic work on the Apple sparkling smart phones instead of playing Hero academy and watching older programs on Net fix. Despite of a very high price label but still these apps are very popular.

In the near future Google using up of the company implies that editing of the documents in Google docs would become very much easy. All this is very good as the present mucking regarding with Google documents or spreadsheets from a mobile gadget is impossible. In its blog the supreme doodler does not mention of Microsoft. But it very much clear that purchasing quick office is a self-protective shift in front of the opening of Windows 8, which is planned to operate on tablets and would definitely bundle masses of compatibility for Microsoft's suite of Office programs.

While there are countless people that uses Microsoft Office tools for doing their work which seems to be quite boring. So bringing up any tablet that makes all your tasks very easy moreover fun in mashing up the presentations and the spreadsheets would discover large spectators. But still a question arises in everyone mind that whether Microsoft's Windows 8 would be the perfect platform for providing great efficiency or whether Google would pip them to the post?
