How to self educate voice lessons by Maria Gini

Article published on February 22nd 2012 | Music

Singing needs a mixture of vocal power, proper diction, nice techniques and ear training. Many aspiring singers try to find mentors to aid them at the initial stage of their career but hiring a professional vocal mentor can be too expensive. Some students may also think of joining a vocal school but that also may not be a reasonable choice for all. Nowadays with the help of online vocal classes or television you can easily take vocal music lessons at the comfort of your home and you do not require a voice mentor at all.

There is a plethora of websites available on the net which offer online vocal classes. These websites contain a vast variety of video clips on vocal music lessons which help students learn the professional singing methods and tips. So now you can learn the new and interesting methods of singing at your own pace.

If you are a novice in singing, you can also make your voice better by playing video games that are related to singing. These types of games will help you attain the accurateness of your voice tone.

You can buy DVDâ€™s and CDâ€™s which contain vocal music lessons. These days in the market you ca get the CDâ€™s and DVDâ€™s of vocal classes from the highly professional and well-known vocal mentor like Roger Burnley and Brett Manning who have trained the famous celebrity singers. Now students can have the opportunity to learn singing at home with the help of these instructional CDâ€™s.

Record your own song. Listen to your song intently and point out the errors where you need to improve. Learn a song sung by a famous singer, sing it and record it. Now compare your own song with the original song sung by the original singer. This way you will be able to point out your own flaws and improve your weak points.

Your friends are your best critics, so sing in front of them so that they can point out your flaws. In this way you can be a good singer without the help of any vocal coach by taking good care of your voice, practicing singing daily and staying away from drinking and smoking (which can affect your voice).
