Responsibilities of a DJ by Daryl Ledyard

Article published on January 21st 2012 | Music

If you think that the only responsibility of a DJ is to play music and entertain the guests, then you are wrong. There are many other things that a DJ has to do while entertaining the guests at a part or a wedding.

The first and most important responsibility of a DJ is to prepare a list of songs that are to be played during a particular scene such as during cake cutting, introduction of families, ring ceremony etc. He should arrange all the songs in order in a CD. There should be a collection of traditional songs to be played for every event.

A DJ should ask the names of all the important people to be introduced in the wedding party during first meeting and he should learn all names properly to avoid any mispronunciation during the wedding. Your voice should be clear and easily audible.

You should have a list of every event in your hand to announce it in proper sequence. Announcements should be clear. When you announce to call anybody on the dance floor, look if he is available in the party or not. It is important if you just move around and inform the person before you announce his/her name for dance.

When you start your job, it is important to address the audience and give an introductory speech to welcome the guests as well to give a farewell speech in the end of the event to thank the guests. It gives a good impression and people feel happy when they are recognized and welcomed in such a way.

Arrange all your equipments properly so that there are no visible cables cluttering here and there. The dance area should be clear and presentable. Your equipment should be in a good working condition so that it may not cause any hindrance in the joy and entertainment of guests.

You should have a pleasing personality. Always keep a smile on your face to cheer your audience. Remember wedding is the most memorable event of your clients and you are hired to make their day one of the biggest event of their life. You have to prepare yourself to sing and dance along with your audience. Your energy will charge your clients and their guests to enjoy in the wedding. Your performance means a lot in making a wedding party enjoyable.

Definitely your performance will give you the right price of your work. In the end if your client feels happy and contented, it means you have done your job perfectly and he will never mind in giving you some extra tip. A good performance not only makes your client feel happy but it also gives you a way to be hired in other weddings.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/music-articles/responsibilities-of-a-dj.htm - Article Side

Daryl Ledyard - About Author:
Welcome to 1-800-DISC JOCKEY. 800dj.com has all the tools to make your a DJ search easier. 1-800-DISC-JOCKEY makes booking a a Wedding DJs easy! Helping select the right entertainment for your needs.

Article Keywords:
DJs, Wedding DJ

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!