Voice Singing - Top 6 People Not to Trust by Houston Simmons

Article published on December 8th 2011 | Music

Picture This:

Itâ€™s your birthday. Itâ€™s late afternoon and the sun is on its way down. Nothing is happening at the moment because youâ€™re sitting down in the company of friends trying to entertain yourself hoping someone would make a suggestion like, â€œHey, letâ€™s do something!â€• Just as youâ€™ve had enou nothing, a group of friends surprise you from the rear, â€œHAPPY BIRTHDAY!!â€• What a treatâ€¦.you hu each oneâ€¦ then out the blue, one of them decides to sing a special song just for you on your special dayâ€¦.

Your eyes and everyone elseâ€™s eyes are looking at each other questioning, â€œWhy is this person with this unattractive voice singing NOW or EVER in his life?! We were nice. We survived it. Nobody died but, boy, it would have been nicer if that person could have sung that special rendition two days earlier before anyone could have had the chance to hear it.

Do you think you would continue to sing if you knew everyone else did not think as highly favorable of your singing voice as you do?

Whether everyone totally regrets hearing you or listens to you with biased ears in your favor, neither is helpful to you.

The â€œeveryone elseâ€• category also includes:

1.) Empathic persons â€“ those people who will want to give support of your singing just because youâ€™r just another human being

2.) Relatives â€“ they like the thought of someone in the family who not only sings but also becomes famous by their singing [so they can borrow money from you when you become rich :-) "and it might just happen if we cheer him on strong enough..."

3.) Friends â€“ those acquaintances that will give an opinion of your singing voice that you would hopefully flatter you; even if it were not fully the truth. They want your friendship.

4.) Associates â€“ those whom you have some sort of business relation and will not express any negative feelings concerning your singing voice so that they wonâ€™t jeopardize any personal future benefit you might offer them

5.) Church members â€“ wonderful people but their spirituality may interfere with their honest judgment concerning your singing voice

6.) Nice, unknowing people â€“ they may or may not speak the truth to you about your singing voice since they have no investment in you not to mention that they may not know what theyâ€™re talking about

So who or what can you trust?

Answer: Unbiased, voice lesson instruction. Someone whoâ€™s had the training and experience: a professional voice teacher with solid teaching experience. You want to entrust your singing voice, your time, your financial resources to a learned, well trained singing voice teacher that can explain step-by-step how you can maximize your singing voice ability without hurting it.

When you find the right singing instruction that can give you helpful voice singing lessons, you and others will hear and become impressed with the consistent improvement of your singing voice.

To try to teach yourself how to sing and be successful is tricky and usually frustrating. It can be very discouraging to fail to make the strides with your singing voice you knew you could if you had the proper voice lessons instructor.

Sing to Feel Good About Yourself

Sing to Feel Love From Your fans

Sing and Hear Their applause!

To Your Singing Success,

Houston Simmons

VoiceLessons4Singing.com

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/music-articles/voice-singing-top-6-people-not-to-trust.htm - Article Side

Houston Simmons - About Author:
Houston Simmons has worked with 2006 Grammy Best New Artist, John Legend, and produced music for Comedy Central. He has taught voice at The Harlem School of the Arts and piloted a World Music course at The High School of Art and Design in New York City. He has authored 4 Simple Steps to Singing, a a how to singing video series and book designed quick and improvement of the a voice singing.

Article Keywords:
how to sing, how to singing, how to sings, how to sing a song, voice singing, the singing voice, singing voice, voice singing lessons, how can you learn how to sing, how do i learn how to sing, how can i learn how to sing, how do you learn how to sing, ho

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!