Article Side
Online Family Lawyer Determining the Type of Child Custody Required by Keith Rodgers

Article published on April 27th 2012 | Others

Child Custody is a crucial issue during the divorce. It generally refers to the legal custody of the child after the divorce. It includes which parent will have the guardianship of the child after the divorce. There are various decisions to be taken related to the childâ€™s education, religion, medical issues; etc.it also includes the physical custody of the child, that with whom the child will live. The decisions regarding the child custody and child support should be taken under the guidance of an Online Family Lawyer soon after the divorce. An Online family Lawyer has an extensive knowledge and experience in the field of family law. He will let his clients know about the possible child custodies available according to their specific case.

Child Custody is a critical decision which influences the child a lot. The arrangements regarding the child custody are made by the judge after knowing the interests of the child. There are various types of Child Custody which can be opted for by taking the advice of the Online Family Lawyer. Joint Child Custody is the most popular custody opted by most of the people. The legal and physical responsibilities of the child are under both the parents. Co-operation with the ex spouse, childâ€™s needs, expenses, preferences of the child are some of the aspects that have to be considered before opting for Joint custody option.

Sole Custody is a traditional form of custody where only one parent has the custody rights of the child. The parent has a full authority for taking any kind of decisions regarding the child. The non custodial parent can only visit the child. In case of multiple children, Split Custody is preferred. The court takes this decision for not separating the siblings by considering various factors. After the divorce, if one parent dies and the other is unable to take up the responsibility of the child, then the court announces Third party Custody. The custody of the child is given to a Third party or if the child is living with a Non parental person, then the custody goes to him. Uncles, Aunts, Grandparents, etc are mostly included in the Third parties. The decision of the Third Party Custody is taken after seeing all the pros and cons. The Online family Lawyer asks for this kind of custody if he finds that both the parents are unfit for the Child Custody. The decision made by the judge is based on the investigations provided by the lawyer.

Article Source:
http://www.articleside.com/others-articles/online-family-lawyer-determining-the-type-of-child-custody-required.htm - Article Side

Keith Rodgers - About Author:
Find out information related to Child Custody arrangements and a Online Family Lawyer by visiting the site http://www.onlinefamilylawyer.info/

Article Keywords:
Online Family Lawyer

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!