Roger James Hamilton and the pelican in the wilderness by Corwin Smith

The world that we are living in at the moment is the one that is full of people with different desires, and different dreams and different agendas. And the only impediment is that these very people become frustrated when they realize that the fun and excitement they are looking for is entirely dependent upon the availability of funds at their disposal. And that is where there minds start thinking about the ways and means of earning enough money to make sure that all their dreams and desires are fulfilled. And then begins the journey into the world of wealth creation and that too in the existing system of wealth creation. And the existing system of wealth creation is entirely under the supremacy of the procedures as set by the mandarins of the world economy. And the end result can be classified into two categories. One comprising of those people who tried their level best to create wealth but did not succeed and remain languishing in the same feelings of dejection and frustration. The other category consists of people who succeed and manage to create enough wealth that can last for generations to come. But according to Roger James Hamilton both the categories would always be characterized by a syndrome of unhappiness and dejection. Rich or poor, as long as you are under the tutelage of the existing system of world economy you would keep missing out on the bliss and excitement that truly defines the word called Life.

But who is Roger James Hamilton who can tell you about the happiness and joy. Who is this man who would tell the richest man on the planet and that too right on his face that deep down he is unhappy, frustrated and maybe feeling like a caged bird. Well! This man is just an ordinary individual who himself had the same dreams as any other ambitious person would have. And this man was only doing and trying his level best to make sure that he remains safe within the confines of the discipline of the system that govern the world economy. But ten years of hard work and the losses as rewards for that hard work made him realize that there is something absolutely wrong with the system itself.

And that left Roger James Hamilton like a pelican in the wilderness with no other system of wealth creation in sight. Thus he decided to find a solution that would take care of all the lacunas that are present in the existing system of wealth creation.
