Fleas cause a lot of problems for pets and families. This is why it is important to choose powerful Frontline cats treatment products. These work fast to destroy adult fleas and prevent them from breeding and taking over your home.

How do Pets Get Fleas?

Britain is a very pet-friendly nation. A large majority of homes have cats or dogs and this means lots of healthy, feeding sources for fleas. The large percentage of pets is just one of the reasons why the flea population thrives.

- With pets frequenting similar areas (such as suburban neighbourhoods, public parks and walking trails) fleas find it so easy to find food that they breed and multiply in vast numbers.

- This means that fleas can be picked up very easily every time you or your pets venture out doors.

- Even housecats that do not go outside can get fleas. They can be carried into the home on clothing and shoes and can also be picked up when you take your cats to the vets.

- This is why it is important to treat pets with Frontline cats treatment products even if they donâ€™t appear to have fleas.

- Frontline cats treatment products will work to protect your pets from picking up fleas in the future and treat any fleas that may already be infesting the host.

Treating Fleas

Many people dismiss fleas as annoying parasites. However as well as being annoying for your pets and your family fleas can also cause a number of quite significant problems including:

- Fleas can cause skin problems for pets such as bald patches and sores from scratching.

- Some pets are also highly allergic to flea saliva. This can make them feel very lethargic and cause extensive skin irritation and hair loss.

- Fleas can transfer microscopic tapeworm eggs in their saliva. This can infest both pets and human and cause a number of potentially serious health problems.

- Young kittens and vulnerable senior cats can also suffer from anaemia caused by fleas. This can be potentially life threatening if not treated quickly.

- This is why it is essential that you take steps to protect your family and pets from fleas using Frontline cats treatment products. These powerful treatments work fast to destroy fleas and prevent re-infestation.
