Hanging your Canvas prints by Andrew Bourke

Article published on August 9th 2012 | Photography

There is many different ways to hang your canvas print and they is also different techniques to try when not only designing the perfect canvas print for a certain space on your wall but also what sort of size canvas prints would be the best option for you in that area.

So you if have photos you want to print onto canvas, it s a great idea and I can recommend it to anyone that is thinking of decoration there living area or any room in their house. Basically purchasing a canvas print is a wonderful thing and itâ€™s very easy but if you donâ€™t have the knowhow then you may end up with a great canvas print that you really like but it might not look correct in a certain room or office or even if you have just got the colours right it may look a little out of place so here is a few tips to help you along the way as if you get it right then it can be very amazing.

Firstly you have a couple of photos that you want to use for your canvas printing, the best way to pick something would be to make sure that itâ€™s got the same kind of colours in the photo as it does to the colours of the room it hanging in and if you have a really cool looking picture that also helps, one really good thing about have a photo printing on canvas is that the photo you have printed would mean allot to you in sentimental value so no matter what you have printed as long as the image is of good quality then youâ€™re bound to love it.

The size is another thing to try and organise before you actually commit to going ahead with a purchase on a photo canvas print, basically if you get a tape measure and measure the area that you want to hang the canvas prints in the then youâ€™re going to be able to take that measurement and then you can decide on what canvas print size you would like to fill that area with weather that be a single canvas print or a number of canvas prints lined up or in some kind of pattern on your wall, this would be well worth will looking into before having your photo printed to the canvas print and then you know before you even get your canvas delivered to you that it will slot right in place just were you wanted it.

So have your most favourite picture printed is a great way to say to the world that youâ€™re in love with your closest family and that you love to see them in your everyday life hung on your walls, itâ€™s a great thing to have and with the fact that when you have your photos printed onto canvas they not only looks brilliant but they are a little more better than just having a simple photograph in your usual picture frame to.
