Transferring your photos on canvas by Andrew Bourke

Article published on April 6th 2012 | Photography

There is many different way to display your photos images around your home but if you really wanted to spice up the living area with something modern yet very unique then having your photos printing on canvas may be the right decision for you.

Letâ€™s say you have some photos that you have had kept away in a draw for a while and you really wanted to show them of but you did want anything to happened to them because they are old photos and they mean allot to you, then I would say that the perfect idea would be to have some canvas prints made from them, basically all it is would be you sending over a scanned in version of that photo then the canvas printers will blow it up and print directly onto canvas inkjet material through a large format printer. Itâ€™s really simple and very low in price to have done to yet the effects and benefit it does for your home is truly amazing.

If you do decide to have a canvas print made from your favourite photo and you really like it then the fun doesnâ€™t stop there, you can have your most up-to-date photos printed on canvas to and thatâ€™s were you would find the best type of colours produced for a more modern photo because there will be better pixels and better vivid colours to print by. Basically the printer will print direct from whatever they have on screen, sometimes they can enhance the colours a little so even if you do want to get an old photo on canvas that has faded a little then that would be ok to have the contrast lifted a little and it will restore some of the photos details. So if you have an old photo canvas print made for yourself then that really good, or even if you give it away as a gift to a family member that is also a very good idea.

You can pretty much picture a canvas print hanging in your wall space before you go ahead with placing an order so basically if you get a photo that has the same colours in it as your home decoration then the canvas print is going to blend in much better and feel right at home, not to worry though if the colours donâ€™t match because thatâ€™s the beauty of canvas printing and the persona the give of because they look great no matter what the colours are and weather there are the opposite to what your home colours scheme is, now thatâ€™s something special that I would love to have hanging up in my wall space and Iâ€™m sure you would say the same. Even if you had a small canvas print hanging in your toilet, its something that compliments the area and gives it more of a homely feel, and there not that many wall decorations that can do that, I would expect that your normally type of picture frames can give you some benefit but not as much as a canvas print would.
