

Article Side

Public Belief on Occupy Wall Street vs Tea Party by

Article published on May 9th 2012 | Politics

Before starting to compare the two movements namely the Occupy Wall Street and also the tea party, let us see what each is about. The Occupy Wall Street protests began in September 2012 in New York, with their goal of demanding a proper distribution of jobs between the public, and avoiding the money concentrating in the rich peoples community. The reason was the inequality of wealth between the wealthiest people of the country, and the rest of the citizens.

The people within the Tea party Movement call themselves as Republicans, and they are a conservative groups demanding the cutting of taxes from the government. Before the Tea party Movement, there was actually a Boston Tea Party. However, the Tea Party Movement is often referred to as the Tea Party Racism.

If we are to talk about any comparisons on the Occupy Wall Street vs Tea Party, there is actually no basis since they are fighting for entirely different reasons. A closer analysis of the facts will make us see the actual similarities and differences between the two. About the similarities, both the parties want the power back, the way is just different for each. The Tea Party Movement has always been considered as racist and it can very well be said that they want the power back into the Republicans.

According to the points of view of some, the Occupy Wall Street protestors are angry for the right thing. The occupy Wall Street was to point out that the wealth of the US is unevenly distributed with only 1% of the population holding most of the wealth. The protest was to point to the fact that the corporate world is reaping all the benefits while the working class continues to suffer. This just means that the company world is getting all the favors while the working class still suffer.

The Occupy Wall Street is composed of the independent working class who wish to voice out their sentiments against the top corporations of the US. On the other hand, the Tea Party is composed of 66% Republicans. What makes this group angry is the size of the government and the rising taxes put on them.

The Occupy Wall Street is a movement which has caught the attention of the American public since the ideas are the very thoughts of many citizens; however, it cannot be denied that some of the protests have gone too far. On the other hand, the Tea Party Movement was not for the novel types of protest but more on the peaceful undertaking.

Discussing Occupy Wall Street vs Tea Party

Article Source:

<http://www.articleside.com/politics-articles/public-belief-on-occupy-wall-street-vs-tea-party.htm> -
Article Side

- About Author:

As the US elections near, many of the previous year's political events will find themselves back in the conversation. Many a Occupy Wall Street vs Tea Party comparisons will be drawn. The question of a Tea Party Racism will probably resurface. These two movements have both shaped political discourse in the US. Their effect on the 2012 election remains to be seen.

Article Keywords:

Occupy Wall Street vs Tea Party, Tea Party Racism

You can find more free articles on Article Side. Sign up today and share your knowledge to the community! It is completely FREE!