Are fully services offices suitable to my business? by Mike Nicholson

Article published on April 19th 2012 | Real Estate

When I heard about “fully serviced offices” for the first time in my life, I took them as fully furnished offices. In fact, they are much more than them. In India, they are in their introductory phase and gaining popularity rapidly. The best thing about these offices is that you can either rent an individual space or an entire floor for your business operations. A fully services office is fully furnished office with secretarial services. This kind of office space is ready to work in and can be customized as per your business needs quickly.

If you are a middle class person and looking to get into the field of business by setting up your own business venture, fully serviced offices are the best choice for you. Most of the young entrepreneurs face financial crunch especially in their initial stages and become unable to set up their own business space. This is where these offices come as a respite to them. They can easily be taken on rent without much fuss and complexity, so you can start your business as soon as possible. Second, you won't need general staff as you will get all the things ready on the floor.

Over the past few years, India has developed a lot in terms of business with many international companies have set up their offices in this region to take their part in the ever growing Indian economy. There is huge potential in the Indian market which these companies want to reap. With the rising level of education in India, more and more young entrepreneurs are pouring in with some great business ideas.

Before you book an office space in Gurgaon, it is important for you to know what you will get in a fully serviced office space for rent in India. The services offered include a dedicated receptionist, administrative support, telecom services, internet connection, and IT set up. Other services include car parking, meeting rooms and a fully equipped kitchen. These offices have changed the way people used to start up their businesses. In this way, you will also end up saving great amount of time that would otherwise you spent on arranging all things in one place. Another advantage is that you can keep your focus on core business operations that are of prime importance at initial times. In fully serviced offices, all these supplementary activities are well taken care of and all you are left to do is to focus on your business development.
