The Cape Coral economy centres around retail, the local governmental services, health care, construction and real estate which continues to thrive due to the continuing desire by huge numbers of people to relocate into the city. The draw of the place is obvious, but besides the idyllic location, glorious weather and wonderful waterfront properties, there are plenty of other plus points that explain why so many wish to make Cape Coral their home.

The education systems are expanding year after year, both in the public and the private sector and the standard of performance is a matter of great pride for the authorities. There are several of what are referred to as Municipal Charter schools which are available exclusively to children who actually reside in Cape Coral. In addition the city has a satellite facility established in conjunction with the Florida Gulf Coast University which is situated very nearby in Fort Myers, to offer core courses to local students.

Several cities in Florida carry with them a slightly unsavoury reputation but safety records in Cape Coral are amongst the very best. Statistical analysis regularly backs up the belief that the place is one of the top 2 or 3 cities for safety of anywhere with a population of over 100,000 people. With over 150,00 residents and rising that is something to be proud of.

The Rosen brothers who came up with the idea for a new community in the area back in the 1950's would certainly be delighted at the way things have turned out. These two land speculators spotted an opportunity and with the help of a massive marketing campaign persuaded thousands to move south and make Cape Coral their home.

It continues to be one of the fastest growing areas in the whole of Florida and shows no signs of slowing. Naturally the guaranteed good weather plays a part in peoples thinking and the year-round temperatures are definitely reassuring rarely falling below the mid 60's and averaging around 75 degrees Fahrenheit annually. There are over 330 days of bright sunshine each year with the remainder being only slightly less glorious. Consequently the summers are extremely warm and very often humid, but the winter months are utterly gorgeous.

There is an occasional risk during the annual hurricane season which can last from June through to November, but that goes for all of Florida it is just a circumstance of the location. The wonderful landscape is aided by regular short sharp downpours which lesson the effect of the humidity. Beautiful beaches are ideal for relaxing or for the more adventurous there are opportunities for yachting and fishing. Public parks are plentiful and there are as many as 7 top class golf courses.

Property in the area includes some of the most luxurious apartments, villas and condominiums in the entire state and available at some incredibly knock prices, whether that be for outright purchase or rental. All in all Cape Coral is an absolutely fabulous place to live with something for everyone in a marvellous setting.
